These young change-makers are not waiting for someone else to solve the world's problems. They are taking action, using their voices and their creativity to make a positive impact on their communities and the world.

This book tells the stories of 25 of these young change-makers. They are from all walks of life, from different countries and cultures. But they all share a common goal: to make the world a better place.

Their stories are inspiring and motivating. They show us that anyone can make a difference, no matter how young or small they are. They also teach us the importance of perseverance, optimism, and compassion.

This book is a celebration of the power of young people. It is a reminder that even in the darkest of times, there is always hope. Because as long as there are young people who are willing to fight for a better future, there is always a chance that we can create a world that is more just, more compassionate, and more sustainable.

Meet Some of the Young Change-Makers Featured in the Book:

- Xiuhtezcatl Martinez is a 17-year-old environmental activist who has been fighting climate change since he was 10 years old. He is the founder of the organization Earth Guardians, which empowers young people to take action on environmental issues.
- Mari Copeny is a 11-year-old activist who has been fighting for clean water in her community. She has met with President Obama and spoken at the United Nations about the importance of access to clean water.
- Malala Yousafzai is a 20-year-old Pakistani activist who has been fighting for the right of girls to education. She was shot by the Taliban in 2012 for speaking out about the importance of education for girls, but she survived and has continued to fight for her cause.
- Severn Cullis-Suzuki is a 26-year-old Canadian environmental activist who has been speaking out about environmental issues since she was 12 years old. She is the founder of the organization the David Suzuki Foundation, which works to protect the environment.
- Adora Svitak is a 21-year-old American author and activist who has been speaking out about the importance of children's rights since she was 7 years old. She is the founder of the organization the Adora

Svitak Foundation, which works to empower children and young people.

These are just a few of the many young change-makers who are making a difference in the world. Their stories are inspiring and motivating, and they show us that anything is possible if we are willing to work hard and never give up on our dreams.
