Lesley Pyne is a psychotherapist and author specializing in women's issues, particularly infertility and childlessness. She has over 20 years of experience helping women navigate the challenges of these experiences and find joy and fulfillment in their lives.

In her book, Finding Joy Beyond Childlessness, Lesley Pyne shares her personal experiences with infertility and childlessness, as well as her professional insights as a psychotherapist. She offers a compassionate and understanding perspective on the challenges that women face when they are unable to have children.

Pyne believes that childlessness is not a tragedy, but rather an opportunity for women to discover new paths to happiness and fulfillment. She provides practical exercises and thought-provoking questions to help readers overcome grief, reclaim their identities, and forge new paths to joy.

"Finding Joy Beyond Childlessness is a must-read for any woman struggling with the challenges of childlessness. Lesley Pyne's insights are invaluable, and her compassion and understanding are evident on every page." - Dr. Sarah Blaffer Hrdy, author of Mother Nature: A History of Mothers, Infants, and Natural Selection

"Lesley Pyne's book is a beacon of hope for women who are struggling to come to terms with childlessness. She offers a roadmap for finding joy and purpose beyond the traditional expectations of motherhood." - Lori Gottlieb, author of Maybe You Should Talk to Someone
