

Incl Visit To The Cities Of Geraza And Gamala In The Decapolis Volume

The Decapolis was a league of ten cities located in the eastern provinces of the Roman Empire. These cities were founded by Pompey the Great in 63 BC as a way to control the region and promote trade. The Decapolis cities were known for their wealth and prosperity, and they played an important role in the spread of Roman culture and influence throughout the region.

Two of the most important cities in the Decapolis were Geraza and Gamala. Geraza was founded in the 3rd century BC by Alexander the Great, and it quickly became one of the largest and most prosperous cities in the region. Geraza is home to a number of well-preserved Roman ruins, including a temple, a theater, and a hippodrome.

Gamala was founded in the 1st century BC by Herod Antipas, and it was located on a hilltop overlooking the Sea of Galilee. Gamala was a strategic military stronghold, and it was the site of a major battle between the Romans and the Jews in 67 AD. Gamala is home to a number of well-preserved Roman ruins, including a fortress, a synagogue, and a bathhouse.
